WOODWARD & LOTHROP.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

PLEASE, Mr. Masculine Reader—If such a thing exists—don't read a word further this morning.

And since, after that warning, of course the eye of every one of us is racing down the page. I'll save you bitter disappointment by telling you my most innocuous reason at once.

This morning's topic can't possibly interest you. It's just a few does-and-don'ts of the millinery world. They were most eagerly contributed by my milliner to distract my attention while I waited for the hat that was to have been done three hours before.

"Positively painful, isn't it, Miss Cameron, to see some of the outlandish things that people who have fairly good taste in other matters will put on their heads?"

"Tell you some of the things one should avoid in getting a hat? Well, let me see."

And these are the "don'ts" she evolved. First of all, don't put blue roses and green poppies and yellow geraniums, and all the rest of the flowers that never were on land or sea, on a hat. There is nothing in worse taste than a flower done in some color it could not possibly be.

"In buying a hat get it to harmonize with the clothes you are going to wear it with, not only in color but in general style. For instance, don't get a lace hat to wear with a suit. That's about on a par with diamonds in the morning or a train and low neck on the street."

Of course, you never should put flowers or plumes on a utility hat. Plumes aren't good taste for a walking or business hat anyway, and neither plumes or flowers look at all attractive after the first damp day. Always trim your utility hat with either feathers or ribbon. You can get much smarter effects with them and effects that will last much longer.

"You wouldn't think it would be necessary to tell people not to put flowers or feathers on a panama, but it is. Why I've seen lots of people who were dressed in fairly good taste otherwise walking around with that particular blunder on their heads."

"I mustn't forget to say something about the auto-bonnet craze. If a girl wants to mark herself 'cheap' in letters big enough to be seen as far off as she is, the best way is to go about the streets with one of those things on. I don't see why it isn't just as out as it would be to wear a riding habit to your business or on a shopping tour and I don't believe any one would do that."

"And while I'm talking about hats I must surely put in a word for the proper care of them. The summer hat needs its daily brush every bit as much as the winter one, but it doesn't seem to get it somehow. Of course, straw doesn't show the dust as felt does, but dust is there just the same, and once the hat gets wet, the straw, if it is light, is apt to be badly discolored. So whatever kind of hat you have don't forget that daily brush."

And now, Mr. Masculine Reader, if any of you did read this far, don't you wish you had heeded my warning?

GEN. LEE'S DOUBLE.

His Son So Like Him Sculptor Used Him to Model Statues.

From the New York Telegram.

Once a month there appears upon the streets of Washington an aged man who bears a striking resemblance to Gen. Robert E. Lee. The man is, in fact, Gen. George Washington Custis Lee, a son of the leader of the Confederate Army, who served as a major-general in the army.

Gen. Lee's regular visits to Washington are not for the purpose of renewing old acquaintances. He always has a more practical mission. As soon as he leaves the train the old soldier wakes to the Ebbit House barber shop. A negro barber greets him courteously, the general steps into the chair and has his hair cut. After leaving the barber shop he steps across the street to the law offices of his son, Robert E. Lee, where he remains for a few minutes. He then takes an early afternoon train back to his home in Fairfax County.

Gen. Lee is president emeritus of Washington and Lee University, of which institution his father also was president. The striking manner in which he resembles his famous father in every detail was illustrated by the sculptor who was selected to design the statue of Gen. Lee which now stands in Statuary Hall at the Capitol. The sculptor had an excellent death mask of the Confederate general, but was somewhat puzzled about the size of the hands until he was informed that Gen. George Washington Custis Lee was the living image of his father. The sculptor thereupon took an impression of the hands of the son.

Asparagus Salad.

Use the green asparagus stalks for this. Boil until tender, but not soft. Drain and chill and cut into inch lengths, keeping the tips separate. Mix the stalks with boiled tongue or tender corn beef cut into dice and arrange on a bed of white chicory or lettuce, using the tips of the asparagus for the border of the dish. When using asparagus in a salad, do not employ other materials which will overpower the delicate flavor of the asparagus, which really makes alone the most delicious salad served.

Higher Criticism.

From Success Magazine.

Georgia was making preparations for her doll's birthday party and her brother stood by helplessly, receiving instructions. "Oh, Palmer," she exclaimed suddenly, "first we must take this child over to church and have her criticised."

Colored embroideries should be set by a soaking in salt water or a solution of sugar of lead or turpentine and water.

After September 8 they will be at home in Grand Forks, N. Dak., where Mr. Elton is engaged in the practice of law.

G. W. U. MAY SELL THE COLLEGE SITE

Offer of $550,000 Submitted for the Property.

COMMITTEE FAVORS THE DEAL

Chairman of Executive Board Issues Statement Regarding Financial Reorganization of the University. Trust Company Will Have Charge of Funds—Audit Proposed.

It seems probable that the property of George Washington University at Fifteenth and H streets northwest will be sold to a purchaser whose name is not divulged for $550,000.

The property has been in the market for about two years, the fact being recognized that whenever an offer should be made for it that was satisfactory to the trustees it would be accepted. Within the two years numerous propositions have been submitted for the purchase of the ground and buildings, none of which eventuated in a sale. Several options have been placed on the property at one time and another only to be canceled at a later date.

Recently two offers for the property, including the college building and law school, were filed with the trustees, one of them for a lump sum of $550,000. The matter of the sale of the property was referred to a special committee for consideration, and at a recent meeting of the trustees this committee reported favorably upon the offer mentioned.

Sale May Be Ratified.

The sale has not yet been ratified by the trustees, certain details of the transaction not being complete, but it is believed that when the necessary papers are ready and the legal technicalities met and sale will be ratified and the transfer made. The sum to be paid for the property amounts to about $37 a square foot, figured on the basis of the ground alone.

In case the transaction is consummated as outlined, it is understood that the buildings upon the property will be either torn down and a new office building erected, or that they will be extensively remodeled to suit the purposes of business.

Statement by Mr. Snow.

The following statement was made by Alpheus H. Snow, chairman of the executive committee of the board of trustees of George Washington University: "In the financial reorganization of the university many novel and difficult questions of law have had to be decided and many complicated matters of fact have had to be ascertained."

"The questions of law are now nearly settled by the opinion of counsel and the agreement of the lawyers concerned, and the matters of fact are now nearly ascertained by the accounts of the auditors appointed by the Attorney General under the resolution of the House of Representatives. It is believed that it will soon be possible for the trustees to take final action."

Will Pay the Creditors.

"It is expected that the reorganization will include the payment of all creditors and the securing of all endowment funds by specific property, which shall represent the funds, the proceeds being to have all endowment funds represented as soon as possible by interest-bearing securities of the best class."

"It is the plan to have these securities held and reinvested by trust companies, these companies to act as the fiscal agents of the university through their trust departments, and the finance committee of the university to have at all times supervision and control of such investments."

"It is also proposed, as a part of the reorganization, to employ an audit company to install a system of bookkeeping consistent with the most modern ideas of university accounting and to appoint such company the permanent auditor, to see that the system is maintained and perfected and that the accounts are at all times correct."
